Downtown Daily Bread, an emergency kitchen in downtown Harrisburg, has been providing free hot lunches to the poor and homeless of Harrisburg for 33 years. It is located in the Boyd Memorial Building of the Pine Street Presbyterian Church and lunches are served 365 days a year.

DDB thanks you for your support.

Women Are Weavers was written by chorus member Florence March. Florence has written for the chorus before, most notably Driven Women. Flo said she wrote the song to express the awe she felt in having a woman run for President. "I realized that women have always been here, but only now are we finally stepping out and being recognized as leaders," she said. She uses the weaving image because of the importance of women in the fabric of our culture. "Women operate by weaving together and creating, rather than by conquering," she said.

Weaving has been associated with women in many cultures and times. Until the Industrial Revolution, weaving of clothes and baskets were important contributors to household economies. In Revolutionary era America, the boycott of British goods, including inexpensive manufactured cloth, meant that more women went back to home production of cloth. Spinning wheels were a symbol of independence and freedom. The Industrial Revolution began, in large part, as mechanization of the production of textiles, and so this change in weaving and cloth-making production meant immense changes in women's lives — and may have helped give rise to the movements for women's rights.

Song Notes...

Duerme Negrto is a Latin American lullaby sung by a slave mother to her “Little Black One” (“darling” or “dear little son”). Her pathos is felt through the litany of what she would bring to her son, if she only she were paid for her labor and she were not sick. She uses a scare tactic in the lullaby, saying her son would have his foot eaten by a “white devil,” if he didn’t go to sleep. The divide between the two cultures is a huge one. The language is that of the black Spanish spoken in the slave culture. The reference to the foot being cut off (to prevent a slave’s escape) and the lack of wages underscore the dehumanizing conditions faced for centuries by slaves throughout the New World.

Beau Soir (Beautiful Evening). Claude Debussy, only 16 at the time, was inspired by a poem by the French poet and novelist Paul Bourget to write this art song. Here is the English translation:

When ‘neath the setting sun glows a river in evening,
and the warm southern wind blows out across the field.
Then from all things a thought arises to be happy,
and it counsels the troubled heart.
And it tells us we should enjoy the gift of living while we’re young and the sun is setting in full bloom.
For we shall go away, like water that is flowing.
It to the sea, we to the tomb.

She Walks in Beauty

Lord Byron

She walks in beauty, like the night
Of cloudless climes and starry skies;
And all that’s best of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes:
Thus mellow’d to that tender light
Which heaven to gaudy day denies.

One shade the more, one ray the less,
Had half impair’d the nameless grace—
Which waves in every raven tress,
Or softly lightens o’er her face;
Where thoughts serenely sweet express
How pure, how dear their dwelling place.

And on that cheek, and o’er that brow,
So soft, so calm, yet eloquent,
The smiles that win, the tints that glow,
But tell of days in goodness spent,
A mind at peace with all below,
A heart whose love is innocent!

Sure On This Shining Night

James Agee

Sure on this shining night
Of starmade shadows round,
Kindness must watch for me
This side the ground.

The late year lies down the north,
All is healed, all is health.
High summer holds the earth.
Hearts all whole.

Sure on this shining night
I weep for wonder
Wand’ring far alone
Of shadows on the stars

WELCOME . . .

The theme of this concert is Calling All Directions, but not just east, west, south and north. The words invite all to join in a common place from our separate lives. There is something very grounding in gathering together. We look forward to those times, especially at Thanksgiving. For a brief time tonight, we all share our love of music and being with family and friends.

The Central Pennsylvania Womyn’s Chorus invites you to experience the many directions from which music comes, including the humorous, familiar, thoughtful and new. We are particularly pleased to bring you a new composition by our own chorus member, Florence March (do you remember her “Driven Women” a.k.a. “Holy Cow”!?).

Tonight we also launch a new initiative, “CPWC Supports,” to highlight a local non-profit agency’s work at each concert. We are pleased to begin with Downtown Daily Bread, Harrisburg’s soup kitchen plus more. Your donation of a can of food will help provide meals for homeless people every day of the year (and provide you with a discount on your concert ticket).

Singers, you bring a special gift, blended skillfully by Artistic Director Jordan Markham. We can’t wait for your musicality and extra touches and surprises thrown in. Board members, I thank you for your dedication, creativity and teamwork. Volunteers, a BIG round of applause for making this year’s spaghetti dinner our most successful yet! I am honored to be a part of this Chorus.

This is my favorite time of year, full of activity and music events from all directions — chorales, holiday programs, symphony, school plays and even caroling. It is non-stop fun, preparation and gratitude for one another. We hope you will be at several gatherings where being yourself is the only thing you need to do or bring. We love sharing this time with you.

Please enjoy refreshments at intermission as you look over and bid on our many raffle items. Mark your calendars for our upcoming events: the annual Chorus Pancake Breakfast and Really Big Rummage Sale on April 29th, and our spring concerts on June 3rd and 4th.

Whatever your tradition, have joyous holidays and delight in the time together.

Cynthia Swanson
President of the Board
